GENERAL SESSION: Solving for the Future in Philly

Location: 400 Level, Terrace Ballroom

Philadelphia is, and always has been, the birthplace of innovative solutions. In addition to being the meeting place for the 1st Continental Congress and one of the country's first cities, it is also home to the first children's hospital, the first U.S. Mint, the first women's medical college, the first computer, and the first World's Fair! The same spirit Ben Franklin applied to his study of electricity in the 1750s is alive and well today. In this session moderated by Philly's own Stan Middleman, President & CEO of Freedom Mortgage, hear from some of the city's top innovators. Madeline Bell, President and CEO of Children's Hospital of Philadelphia (CHOP), has advanced pediatric ambulatory and behavioral health care for the city. Sister Mary Scullion is the President and Executive Director of Project HOME, helping thousands of people through a creative continuum of supportive housing and comprehensive services to break the cycle of homelessness and poverty.

Residential Education Networking Group Roundtable: Exploring Artificial Intelligence in Training - Unveiling Benefits and Overcoming Barriers (RSVP Required)

Location: 100 Level, Room 120C

To RSVP, please reach out to smcgory@mba.org The panel discussion on "AI in Training: Unveiling Benefits and Overcoming Barriers" will delve into the transformative role of artificial intelligence in modern education and workforce development. As AI continues to shape various industries, its integration into training programs brings forth a plethora of benefits. AI-driven training solutions offer personalized learning experiences, adapting to individual learners' paces and preferences, thereby enhancing engagement and knowledge retention. These technologies also facilitate the analysis of vast amounts of data to identify trends, gaps, and areas of improvement, enabling organizations to make informed decisions about their training strategies. However, alongside these benefits, the discussion will also explore the significant barriers that AI-driven training encounters. Concerns such as data privacy and security, the potential for algorithmic bias, and the need for upskilling educators to effectively utilize AI tools will be addressed, shedding light on the importance of striking a balance between technological advancement and ethical considerations in the realm of education and training. In this panel, experts from diverse fields will engage in a thought-provoking dialogue, sharing insights on how AI is reshaping training methodologies. By dissecting the benefits that range from adaptive learning to data-driven insights, participants will gain a comprehensive understanding of how AI optimizes learning outcomes. Simultaneously, the discussion will offer a candid examination of the barriers that must be navigated, including challenges related to data security, human-AI collaboration, and ensuring equitable access to AI-powered education. By unpacking both the promises and limitations of AI in training, this panel aims to foster a nuanced understanding of the path ahead, where innovation and responsibility converge to define the future of education and skill development.
