The U.S. Supreme Court recently denied a petition for writ of certiorari in Spokeo v. Robins, declining an opportunity to clarify its previous decision regarding the standard for determining what constitutes a “concrete harm” for purposes of Article III standing in class actions. The lack of clarity has left federal district and appellate courts split over how to apply the “concreteness” standard when analyzing standing, particularly in the context of intangible injuries. The question that banks and non-bank lenders have is “what’s next?” and how to mitigate and defend risk in this area. This presentation will offer insights into those questions.

Compliance in Action: Use Case Workshop

Location: Platinum Ballroom F, Conference Center Level 2

This panel of regulatory, legal and compliance experts will show you how compliance looks in action. It's the battle Royal of the Legal Issues Conference! Regulators on one side, industry counsel and bank compliance staff on the other. Attendees will take home real life examples of how to address, respond to, and resolve compliance issues. Actual fact patterns, taken from previous enforcement activity illustrate how a compliance violation causes risk to a financial institution, the role of counsel and when to include them and when not, and how the bank's compliance staff participate and ensure corrective action is taken so the violations do not reoccur. This is a session you will not want to miss!
